New York City, the most populous city in the United States, is home to over 6,486 completed high rise buildings of at least 35 meters, of which at least 113 completed are taller than 600 feet (183 m).

List of tallest buildings in New York City - Wikipedia

Building height is measured from the lowest floor generally used for human occupancy to the architectural top of the building, including spires or other projections, except for a dome or other non-habitable structure used for low-level ventilation. This includes the height to the top of the building's roof, whether flat or pitched, and includes the height to the top of the building's facade, whether flat or curved. The height of a building is not necessarily the same as the height of the building's structure, as some buildings have a lower level of structure below ground level. Buildings are ranked by height in descending order. Buildings with a height of 300 feet (91.4 m) or more are listed in descending order of height. Buildings with a height of 300 feet (91.4 m) or more are listed in descending order of height. Buildings with a height of 300 feet (91.4 m) or more are listed in descending order of height.
