I'm not a science person, and this book is a few years old now, so take this for what it's worth. This is a fantastic and lucidly written introduction to some of the questions modern physics raises about God, the universe, and the mind.

Stephen Barr - Wikipedia

pdf In this well-reasoned and accessible book, Stephen Barr argues against the idea that modern science has discredited belief in God. While many philosophers and theologians in recent years have similarly objected to the perspective of the æscientific materialist (i.e., the atheist), what makes Barr's effort noteworthy is that he does so from the perspective of physics.
